

DAKOTA WESLEYAN
UNIVERSITY

President's Report

June 1, 2016 – May 31, 2017

From the President

Dakota Wesleyan University is celebrating.

We celebrate because your generosity helped us to surpass our $40 million goal for A Greater Wesleyan three years ahead of schedule.

What does this mean? It means our students are able to participate in life-changing experiences, like CiCi Schneider's personal transformation from soccer athlete to international school-feeding and innovative-gardening advocate. It means athletic training students like Ben Gannon are able to achieve their goals on the athletic field as well as in new athletic training facilities. Theatre students perform in a new theatre that allows for tremendous flexibility in productions. And it means that students who face personal financial crises can be supported through the Pam Boline Student Emergency Fund.

We are celebrating because the inaugural year of the President's Circle enjoyed 342 charter members, and the overall A Greater Wesleyan campaign engaged 5,200 donors.

Our celebration encompasses new facilities, rich student experiences, outstanding faculty and unique community partnerships. We are leading the way in higher education because of you.

Thank you for your generosity; your gifts to Dakota Wesleyan University are changing lives.

We celebrate you.

Ben Gannon

Class of 2018

Ben Gannon, of San Pablo, Calif., is a DWU senior pursuing his athletic training degree and finishing his fourth season as an offensive lineman for the Tiger football team. He hopes to use the skills he learned in the classroom and on the field in his future career.

“At DWU you are not just learning from a book, you are applying what you learn in class in real-world settings. Application-based learning is helping me to not only retain the information, but also making me a better professional.

“Scholarships gave me the opportunity to receive a higher education. Knowing that someone gave of his or her hard-earned money for me, it shows that they care. It shows that the university cares, and they all expect great things out of you. It makes me want to work as hard as I possibly can because it is not just about me ... there is a bigger picture.”

Pam Boline

Student Emergency Fund

The Pam Nielson Boline Student Emergency Fund was established in memory of a beloved DWU professor of human services, Pam Boline, by her brother and sister, Richard Nielson and Karen Nielson, and her father, Wallace Nielson '54. Pam became the face of human services at Dakota Wesleyan University in 1980 and was a surrogate mother to hundreds of students during her 26-year career. She was married to the late Kent Boline, and they made their home just outside of Mitchell – a home with a kitchen table often surrounded by student-athletes. Pam was always committed to students and their activities, being a DWU TeamMaker, faculty athletic representative and adviser to the Human Services Club. She was also committed to her community and was a founding member of the Mitchell Area Safehouse, serving as its board president; was a founding board member of South Dakota Court Appointed Special Advocates Association; and was the longest active member of the Davison County Child Protection Team. The list of organizations and awards is long.

It was her wish to begin this fund. The Pam Boline Student Emergency Fund will assist students in times of crisis. These funds do not need to be repaid and are intended to help students meet unforeseen financial emergencies that might otherwise prevent them from continuing their education.

CiCi Schneider

CiCi Schneider, of Sioux Falls, S.D., is a senior at Dakota Wesleyan University with a double major in psychology and nonprofit administration with a minor in political science. She came to DWU with only one goal in mind: to play college soccer. But through her experiences at DWU, she not only found her calling, but also has made an impact.

An internship experience before her junior year had a life-changing effect on CiCi. The McGovern Center director, Dr. Alisha Vincent, helped her find an internship at the Global Child Nutrition Foundation, which works specifically to help bring governments, nongovernmental organizations and the World Food Programme together to create sustainable school feeding programs.

“I was challenged to critically think about sustainable, ethical and culturally sustainable international development. Since then, everything has seemed to fall into place.”

Last fall, CiCi joined other students and Ester Nampeera, a native of central Uganda and a Ph.D. candidate at Iowa State University, to create a sustainable school lunch program for two Ugandan schools by finding farming techniques that could yield high-vitamin produce like orange flesh sweet potatoes, maize, beans and spinach, among others. This program would ensure the students at these schools receive five balanced meals a week and an increase in school attendance.

“By consulting with individuals in the Mitchell community, we designed an innovative garden. It uses traditional, vertical and hydroponics to grow the various crops.”

These efforts were put to use last December when a group went to Uganda to teach the different farming practices; and this past Thanksgiving, CiCi was able to go to Uganda to see the results firsthand.

“Getting to see the garden and meet the individuals who are at the heart and soul of the project, and are the real reason it has been so successful, concluded a major chapter of my DWU experience.

“I came here an athlete – soon, I will be leaving a whole person.”
